Notes: This is primarily a reggae/ dancehall label. Some of the singles were also released in Jamaica and Japan.

The name design of this British label had several stalactites hanging from inside the top curve of the letter “C” of “Cave.” This logo changed slightly from one release to another: some had the “C with stalactites” within a small oval and others showed a larger “CAVE & C with stalactites” without the oval. The color of the singles label changed several times:

canary yellow, lime green, varied blue, black, and red. Some of the early single labels (Cave 006) had the simplified cave logo repeated faintly throughout the label area behind the printing. (See also under Cave Group Names section)

The album cover of the Cave Crew LP & CD releases showed a view looking past stylized stalactites into a decorated cave passage draped with real stalactites and floored with real stalagmites.

El Feco is a Dancehall DJ from Philadelphia.
