Diamante (Dial) 50.1415

12" 33rpm (Sd 1– Bd 2)

Notes: The group first formed in Madrid in 1959 but has seen several different members over the years. They play Spanish-influenced rock, jazz, and some easy listening numbers. This is a very short light piece, "Cave of Tears," where a wind instrument performs the high notes of a simple melody, which could almost have been a musical cue for a film sequence.

The album cover photo shown here does not necessarily show the same musicians as those that worked on the original Movieplay LP.

It is not known if this composition was inspired by an actual cave and, if so, where that cave is located.

Notes: This lover's lament entitled, "The Cave of the Dragon," is not related in any way to the famous show cave in Majorca, Cueva del Drach. Set to an ordinary melody the mellow lyrics tell of a lover making a submissive appeal. (See LY-PO14 for the lyrics) The chorus speaks of taking a troubled refuge in the cave of the dragon.

CORO:

En la cueva del dragón, he metido el corazón
Y me temo que por ti, ya no saldrá de allí.
San Jorge no me salvará, el fuego me consumirá
Pero es una bendición la cueva del dragón.

CHORUS:

The cave of the dragon, I have put my heart in it
And I'm afraid that for you I will not be able to leave there.
Saint George will not save me, the fire will consume me
But it's a blessing, the cave of the dragon.

LP: LA CUARTA DE A. POLO

Hispavox 160 346 (Series: La Revista)
12" 33rpm (Sd 2 – Bd 1)

Notes: This is a Spanish musical comedy in part inspired by the Isle of Majorca with titles like this and also “Chopin en Valdemosa.” The musical was first performed on TVE (Spanish Television) on November 19, 1985 at 21h 35min.

This song is an operatic, highly sentimental love song with the “Cuevas del Drach” having a prominent place in the chorus. It was not possible to provide the lyrics here.

The photo of Massiel here is from the YouTube video showing the singer matted over the travelling shot of the formations around the Lago Martel in the show cave. This video begins with the symphonic prelude using images filmed from a boat wandering on the Lake Martel in the cave. These cave shots continue in the background as the singer, Massiel, performs the first stanzas and chorus of the song and a boatman presumably rows her around the cave lake. For the instrumental bridge the scene changes to the stage performance of a dance troupe doing rather standard, uninspired chorographic figures. Then Massiel returns with a further stanza and chorus.

Notes: This Spanish pop-rock instrumental piece, “The Dance of the Bats,” is vigorous guitar romp with a sax solo. The illustration of the bats dancing by Piotr Parda was for the children’s book, “The Gentleman Bat.”

This group first formed with the Sainz brothers and Ignacio Martin Sequeros (all with the group Los Pekenikes – see above) along with José González, Luis Baizan and Joaquin Torres. While it was thought that this was a new group seriously competing with the Pekenikes, there always existed suspicion due to its similarity with this group. (Anon. 2014)

Taranto’s should not in any way be confused with the Italian actor Nino Taranto.
